Mondello beach

Charming apartment just a stone's throw from the main piazza and beach, sleeping 2-4 guests and private transfers included

With Casa Anna as your base, you can immerse yourself in the vibrant lifestyle of this fashionable seaside town or explore the glories of Western Sicily by car.

Located in a quiet and characterful street just off the main square, this gem of an apartment is decorated in typically colourful Sicilian style with tasteful furniture and ceramics in blue and white Mediterranean colours.

It is only a couple of minutes' walk to the lively and the trendy haunts of the visiting Palmeritani and to the lovely beach, which encircles the bay. Mondello's seafront boasts a wide selection of seafood restaurants, trattorie and cafés and betrays its origins as a fishing village, in the early morning, when the fishermen sell their catch on the streets. The many shopping and cultural attractions of the capital, Palermo, are only a short drive or bus ride away.

We are delighted to offer exclusively to Simpson Travel, this charming apartment in the heart of Mondello.

St John's - (1)

Antigua and Anguilla are fabulous islands, Antigua has many beautiful beaches and a good selection of 3-4 star hotels, where as Anguilla the scenery just takes your breath away, luxury resort hotels along the whitest sandy beaches I have ever seen.
Reviewed by Debbie King age 33

I spent a glorious week on the island courtesy of British Airways Holidays. I stayed in a private villa at Galleon Beach close to English Harbour. The whole of the island is adorable & quite easy to get around. The capital, St John's, has something for everyone with shopping, local museums & the very famous cricket ground. It can get busy on certain days of the week when cruise liners dock there for the day. Take a trip on a pirate galleon complete with rum punch refreshments! Shirley Heights offers magnificent views across the whole island & is easily reachable. The beaches are fantastic with excellent watersports

Jolly Beach

I stayed at the Jolly Beach resort in Antigua. Antigua itself was paradise! Beautiful white soft sands and clear turquoise blue warm waters. The capital of Antigua, St Pauls, has a shopping mall which has many duty-free bargains plus souvenir shops. The Jolly Beach resort was amazing. I stayed in a standard room which had a king size bed, very clean and spacious over looking the fantastic gardens. The hotel offered many sporting activities, windsurfing, snorkelling, waterbikes and many more. The hotel had 5 restaurants including buffet style and Indian. There is a barbeque for lunch and a swim uo bar. The hotel also offers tea and cakes late afternoon which I thought was very nice for a snack before dinner. There was evening entertainment every night, dancing, singing, theme nights and a game room. I would recommend the Jolly Beach resort to any one looking for a fantastic hotel with excellent facilities and as its good value for money.

weddings in Antigua

Antigua was fabulous. Something for everyone, whatever you like to do. I was lucky enough to see various hotels and look at wedding locations throughout Antigua. With 365 beaches, 1 for each day of the year you will be spoiled for choice. There are hotels from 3* upto 5* and whichever you choose you will not be disapointed. The blue waters and the Galley Bay are the most impressive of hotels with excellent wedding locations and then you have the great 3* hotel, Jolly Beach which is great for larger parties that would like more going on. Whichever hotel you choose you will have a fantastic time. Food is excellent, local people are fabulous, book it as soon as you can!

A NEW SKILL

Why? When Roberts was training me, after a few weeks he suggested I learn a new activity, one that would help redistribute the muscle blocks that were being worked. I suggested the guitar, he threw down rock-climbing or tennis, so we settled on kayaking.

How? It doesn't have to be kayaking, but as I was doing a lot of legwork — walking, running and cycling — at the time, I thought it would help my upper body. I learnt to do it in the San Juan Islands of Washington State, in the USA, but you can have a similar experience much closer to home. The Adventure Company (0845 450 5311, www.adventurecompany.co.uk) has a variety of sea-kayaking trips exploring the Dalmatian islands and coast near Dubrovnik. Its eight-day family-based Kids in Kayaks costs from £669 per child and £699 per adult. This includes flights from Heathrow, all transportation and kayak tuition, seven nights' B&B, and the services of a group leader. Also in Croatia, Original Travel (020 7978 7333, www.originaltravel.co.uk) has three nights' B&B, with two days' private sea kayaking, guiding, flights and transfers, from £710pp.

The mother lode of multiactivity is Queenstown in New Zealand, but the small Slovenian town of Bovec is aiming to take its crown. With the Julian Alps above, the River Soca below and the Triglav National Park at the back door, there are up to a dozen adventure companies organising skydiving, rock climbing, potholing, bungee-jumping, kayaking, rafting, hiking and skiing; see www.bovec.si. Croatian Affair (020 7385 7111, www.croatianaffair.com) features Slovenia and can advise on kayaking and rafting in Bovec. The price for a week at the Mulej Tourist Farm in Bled starts at £378pp, B&B, including flights from Gatwick. Prices for rafting/kayaking start at about £17pp, including equipment, transport, guide and insurance.

TRAVEL AGENCIES CLOSING AROUND MY FEET

Wednesday, November 7th, 2007 by Darren Cronian

I spent some time walking around the city centre at lunchtime and noticed that four travel agencies have closed down in recent weeks; these being a branch of Thomas Cook, Co-Op Travel, Direct holidays and Siesta Holidays.

It appears that the mergers have started to show on the high street, which was only to be expected I suppose. This obviously means fewer travel agencies in the high street, and maybe an opportunity for a few independent travel agencies to set themselves up there.

Interestingly, the notice on the Siesta holidays window said that you could now book holidays online. Not sure I should speculate, but is this a sign of more smaller travel companies realising running costs are cheaper online, and more people are booking online, so let's close up shop.

I'm not suggesting this is an end of the high street travel agency, far from it, consumers will always want to speak to helpful humans, but has anyone else noticed agencies closing down in their high street?

TRAVEL COMPANIES NEED TO DO MORE FOR BLIND TRAVEL CONSUMERS

Tuesday, November 6th, 2007 by Darren Cronian

Last week I received an email from Anna, she's blind, and she hasn't being on holiday for ten years because she's had so many problems trying to communicate with travel companies. We communicated on MSN last night, through her text recognition speech software, and she discussed with me her holiday planning experiences.

Travel Video of the Day

10 Responses to "Travel Agents to blame for Fees for Flight ticket changes?"

Kevin May Says:
October 31st, 2007 at 10:58 pm

the high charges these days cannot be blamed on travel agents.

a very high proportion of air tickets are now sold direct via the web (especially BA).

Annette from Tropicaltravel.net Says:
November 1st, 2007 at 2:41 am

I agree that the high rates of ticket nowadays cannot be blamed on travel agents. We purchase all tickets online while on the phone with the client. We are able to tell them the price right then, print up the information, and book the flight. No booking is done without the client knowing the exact time we are doing it.

Paul Says:
November 1st, 2007 at 3:33 pm

I don't think the ex-employee was suggesting it still happens now, but what was happening 15 years ago.

But charging for name changes does seem to stop the ticket touts. Take a look here to see what is happening in the concert industry.

"who use [...] software to buy tickets they can resell to the public at higher prices. Such actions have blocked consumers from getting those tickets at the "face" price shown on the ticket."

I don't think anyone would want that happening in the travel industry.

Colin Maddocks Says:
November 2nd, 2007 at 1:11 pm

The whole airline ticket markey has always been a nightmare. However, the days of the "bucket shop" are long gone so at least that whole area of undercutting my apparently unlicensed brokers has been cleared up.

Brian Says:
November 2nd, 2007 at 9:59 pm

Am I missing something? How could you 'tout' a plane ticket? Tickets are non-transferable as part of standard terms and conditions. Would you buy a ticket for a John Smith and hope to tout it to a Jon Smith via a name change? What about showing ID? Address and credit card details not matching up. I don't get it.

Actually quick check, maybe u can, kinda. BA's T&Cs. Pretty sure non-transfer is standard. Anyone know better?

This is actually Shuttle America (RP) 6499 JFK-DFW, sold as Delta Connection. Shuttle America operates regional flights for Delta, United and US Airways.

Thanks you, I know something was wrong when I read the Flight number. Delta only has numbers up to the 3700s. anything over that is a connection or a code-share.

doesn't matter.. delta sold me the ticket, the plane left out of a delta gate at a delta terminal.. delta napkins, delta barf bags.. nowhere was it written "Shuttle America".. CEO of delta had to defend this flight on CBS Evening News.. so there ya go :p

Unbelievable. I don't think I could ever wait that long on a airplane.

Not really a fair clip... You show a Delta 757 in the initial scene but you are NOT on a Delta aircraft. You are on a connection aircraft, some kind of regional jet (RJ). Flight 6499 to DFW is operated by a different company. These regional airlines have poor service and cramped spaces. The young and inexperienced crews are not up to the task... Before you book your flight be sure to look and see what kind of aircraft you're on... if it's an RJ, good luck!

if you had flown jetblue, they would've given you a voucher (free flight) in the amount you paid for the round trip (or the oneway trip, doubled).

but i do feel for you. it sucks when a controllable irregularity dicks over a flight like yours :)\ funny video thanks :D .. unfortunately jetblue doesn't fly out of DFW :(.. I have flown them before (FLL to JFK) right after 9/11/01 and I was very impressed.. loved it.. Delta pulled 90% of their gates out of DFW so I was hoping maybe Jetblue would come fill 'em in :D
